WIA President's Letter

Part of Wiltondale's charm is that it presents a pleasant blend of well-designed houses built of quality materials. That was the vision of Wiltondale's developer when our homes were constructed in the 1940's, the 1950's and the 1960's in a time when brick and stone exteriors, slate roofs, plaster walls, and hardwood floors were the norm. And although many different builders constructed our homes, a single developer was responsible for the layout of our streets and for the overall blend of our neighborhood's architectural styles. Besides a legacy of a beautiful neighborhood, that developer left us with the legal mandate to adhere to his vision. That legal mandate takes the form of architectural covenants in the deed to every house that require that all major changes to neighborhood properties be approved by the Architectural Committee of the Wiltondale Improvement Association. Items that require approval include additions, porches, decks, patios, and sheds, as well as changes to roofing and fencing.

According to our association's bylaws, the Architectural Committee is composed of the association's president, the vice-president, the two most recent past presidents, and two other members appointed by the president. The committee receives written proposals for property improvements, reviews those proposals, suggests changes or refinements if necessary, and then issues written approval. Some proposals, such as backyard patios or replacement fences, can be approved relatively quickly. Others, such as major additions, are examined more thoroughly, sometimes with in-depth dialogue between the committee and the homeowner as well as lengthy discussions among committee members. The approval process in those cases, therefore, necessarily moves more slowly. For that reason, the rules allow the committee up to 45 days to review proposals.

The committee is cognizant that modern-day budget constraints do not always allow the use of the same type of building materials that were routinely used fifty years ago. The committee is also aware, however, that the results of its decisions are visible and permanent. The goal of the committee, then, is to discharge its duty expeditiously and fairly but with its eye always on its mandate: to ensure that our neighborhood continues to present a pleasant blend of well-designed houses built of quality materials.
